

AXONOMETRIC

The main structure of the building is reinforced concrete, which is mainly supported by radial column grids and waffle slabs. Most of the ground floor has non-load-bearing special-shaped concrete walls to create a more flexible space.